

Introducing the College Board National Recognition Programs

Starting in fall 2019, if you're African American, Hispanic American or Latinx, Indigenous, and/or live in a rural area, and you're taking the PSAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test[®], you may be invited to apply for academic recognition as part of the College Board National Recognition Program.

Benefits

The College Board National Recognition Programs are academic honors that can be included on college applications. It's not a scholarship, but colleges use it to identify academically exceptional students.

Who's Invited to Apply

The College Board reaches out to students who:

- Take the PSAT/NMSQT[®] in October of their junior year
- Are African American, Hispanic American or Latinx, or Indigenous
- Live in a rural area, as indicated by their home zip code
- Achieve the minimum requested PSAT/NMSQT scores (qualifying levels may vary by state each year)
- Earn a cumulative GPA of 3.5 or higher by the middle of their junior year

Visit psat.org/recognition for more information.

OUR PARTNERS

We're working with four of our strategic partners to distribute these honors. Learn more about our partners and the scholarships they offer at psat.org/scholarships.

African American Recognition

HISPANIC
SCHOLARSHIP
FUND

Hispanic Recognition

HOME OF THE COBELL
SCHOLARSHIP

Indigenous Recognition

JACK KENT COOKE

FOUNDATION

Rural Recognition